Cultar Cinnidhean na h-Alba – The Scottish Clans

1. From the Gaelic word 'clann' (children)
2. Cinneadh
3. Given many Scots their surnames/provided a great deal of family pride/produced a fierce sense of belonging – many people regard membership of a clan as a vital part of their Scottish heritage.
4. a) Chief
 - b) The chief would have been like a father figure to his clansfolk and would make sure they had enough suitable land to enable them to provide for their family. Rule over and look after their clan.
5. They were loyal to their chief, and would be ready to fight any battles he wanted them to. They would also take turns working on the chief's land and would give him gifts of food and provisions.
6. Saw it as a threat to their rule and their plans to join England and Scotland together. The King wanted to control the clans to make them swear allegiance to him rather than their chief.
7. a) King James tricked the chiefs and forced them to agree to a list of new laws.
 - b) This resulted in the whole clan structure beginning to fall apart and Gaelic language and culture began its slow demise.
8. The old clan system no longer exists. Each clan still has a chief, but usually the chief doesn't have a Scottish accent, let alone the ability to speak any Gaelic.

Flòraidh NicAmhlaigh

Flora MacAulay is on Fourth year at Oban High School. She intends to leave school on Fifth year and train to be a nurse. She hopes to go to University in Glasgow or Edinburgh. She needs to get four Highers at grade B to get into the course.

Next year she will be taking Higher Maths, English, Chemistry, Biology and Gaelic.

Her favourite subject is Biology but she thinks that Chemistry is quite easy.

For this job, she says that you have to be understanding, patient, kind and good with people. She thinks she would enjoy the job even though the wage is not very good.

She works every weekend in a care home and enjoys it very much.

When she has finished her training, she would like to work abroad for a year. She says it would be good to work in a hospital or small clinic out in the country.

When she returns to Scotland, she would like to live and work in Glasgow. When she has enough money she will get a nice house and a small car too.

When Flora is about thirty years old, she would like to marry and hopes to have children.
